The genuine firm has confirmed that it has no connection to the individual or email address referred to in the above alert, nor do they offer services in relation to cryptocurrencies or employ an individual called 'Sarah Cooper'.

The private company GC Business Lawyers Ltd has also confirmed that they do not have any genuine connection to this correspondence and do not employ an individual called 'Sarah Cooper'.

What should I do?

When a firm's or individual's identity has been copied exactly (or cloned), due diligence is necessary. If you receive correspondence claiming to be from the above firm(s) or individual(s), or information of a similar nature to that described, you should conduct your own due diligence by checking the authenticity of the correspondence by contacting the law firm directly by reliable and established means. You can contact the SRA to find out if individuals or firms are regulated and authorised by the SRA and verify an individual's or firm's practising details. Other verification methods, such as checking public records (e.g. telephone directories and company records) may be required in other circumstances.
